Supporting the essential interests of Forum participants in access to information for investment decisions, we have organized a program with the CFA Society New York (formerly known as the New York Society of Security Analysts) for their hosting of an event providing direct access to the senior management of Oshkosh Corporation.* Details of the event, to be webcast live on Tuesday, November 10th, beginning at 4:00pmET, can be found on the Society's website:

Come explore with us, in a live meeting with CEO Wilson R Jones and plant tour, how this Fortune 500 industrial makes sustainable profits as a market leader in essential products....

Institutional Asset Management, Virtual Events & Programming

The Society's Institutional Asset Management Group will be moderating the live discussion of Oshkosh executives with a panel of buy-side and sell-side analysts, and webcast participants will be able to present questions.

The Forum invited Oshkosh's participation in this program as an example of a company that demonstrates the effective use of capital to produce competitively successful products that are essential to society, including during and after the current pandemic disruption. Our examination of how Oshkosh management achieved and maintains its market position in several product categories should benefit Forum participants and Society members, as well as the investment marketplace.

Many Forum participants, and also many Society members, have expressed enthusiasm for this renewal of the company-specific analysis programs for which the Society co-founded the Forum two decades ago. Having started the planning of this project before the pandemic and adapting to the current need for virtual communications that may have continuing benefits for access events, we look forward to supporting the mission for which Benjamin Graham organized the Society.
